

College of Law and Political Science

Intended Learning Outcomes of the Academic Program

First: Cognitive Objectives

- The ability to analyze legal texts and general legal principles.
- The ability to compare between different legal schools in a manner consistent with reality.
- The ability to understand the relationship between law and other disciplines.
- The ability to provide legal advice.
- The ability to draft legal claims in both formal and substantive aspects.
- The ability to identify and solve legal problems.

Second: Skill-Based Objectives

- The ability to plead before courts.
- The ability to link theoretical study with practical reality.
- The ability to conduct legal analysis of facts.

Third: Affective and Value-Based Objectives

- Deepening awareness of human rights.
- Consolidating the principles of legal justice.
- Strengthening ethical values.

Fourth: General and Transferable Skills Related to Employability and Personal Development

- Building an independent legal personality capable of effective communication.
- The ability to invest and use time productively.
- Adopting diplomacy and flexibility in interaction and communication.
- Self-reliance.
- The ability to access and develop information.

